Leah Mermelstein:
Going Beyond the Units of Study
Instructional Strategies to Match Student Needs
With Beth Moore

2-day Writing Institute with a focus on Informational - Essay Writing
Thursday, June 22 and Friday, June 23, 2017

Target Audience: Teachers of Grades K-6, Writing Teacher Teams, Coaches

Leah will begin the institute sharing the 'must-haves' of Writing Workshop as well as the components of a balanced writing curriculum, how to make responsible choices in topic, minilessons and process, as well as creating self-directed learners.

In this two-day institute, participants will learn about overarching learning and teaching concepts for writing workshop, building units of study that are tailored to your students' needs, and incorporating the Lucy Calkins' materials as well as specific instructional strategies into your writing curriculum.

There will be break-out sessions where Leah will focus more deeply in a K-2 group and Beth with grades 3-6. Each will go beyond the units of study and give teachers and teams opportunities for unit development that incorporates specific instructional strategies to reach all learners, developing resources for conferring and small group work inside a unit. The institute will close focusing on closure strategies. The soon-to-be published book: The Writing Strategies Book will be included with registration fee.
