Collaborative Professional Learning to Support Vermont Schools

Pam Moran and Ira Socol

Virtual Innovation* Leading for Professional Learning

In this 'new reality' of public educators retrofitting their programs in the space of days, our educational leaders are being asked to inspire confidence, calm the waters, connect virtually with their teams and communities, develop systems of food distribution, continuity of services and virtual or offsite education for their students K-12. All this, while keeping themselves and their families safe from a deadly virus. Overwhelming? Sign-up, and share what you are hoping to connect about on our registration page. You will have the benefit of a great conversation with two innovative experts and your Vermont colleagues.

CVEDC knows that right now, our normal workshops or seminars have to take a backseat to schools planning and implementing a whole new school environment for the remainder of the year. Our hope is we can be of help, by providing a free webinar for our leaders to spend an hour online to discuss the issues of the day and support each other.

- What are you experiencing, learning, discovering or being frustrated by?
- How has your remote contact with kids, families, & communities been working?

Register on our website for one of the dates 4/15 or 4/16.

Co-facilitated by Pam Moran, Senior Philosophy and Policy Advisor and Ira Socol, Senior Provocateur and Learning Environment Specialist of Socol-Moran Partners

NOTE: A second set of May webinars to discuss planning for face to face instruction in the fall can be offered, as well.
